LONDON HOST AT EUROPE'S FIRST SESSION OF "AD" MEN

Prince Of Wales Welcomes World's Delegates

3,000 AT SESSION

Viscount Burnham And Ambassador Kellogg Speak

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 14.—The first International Advertising Convention in Europe, which is attended by over 5,000 delegates from all parts of the world, was opened today by the Prince of Wales in the Palace of Industry at Wembley. The Palace was decorated with flowers and the flags of the different countries. Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and Mr. Frank Kellog, the United States Ambassador, were present.

The Prince of Wales was given an enthusiastic reception by the assembly, who rose and sang the National Anthem and cheered for several minutes.

Viscount Burnham, the President of the Empire Press Union, welcomed the delegates.

The Prince of Wales said that advertising aimed at providing throughout the world a freer exchange of commodities at a lower cost of distribution, resulting in the elimination of waste and the reduction of prices and unemployment.

Mr. Kellog believed that the inter-Allied conference in London would solve the greatest economic problem that had confronted Europe for generations.

Mr. J. H. Thomas welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Government.

NEXT MAIL DUE IN SHANGHAI ON EMPRESS LINER

President Madison Will Take American Mail Out Tomorrow

Following the arrival yesterday noon of the Pacific Mail Liner President Pierce at the China Merchants' Central wharf, the next mail from America is due aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia.

The Empress of Russia is scheduled to reach Shanghai, Friday noon and will sail for Hongkong and Manila at 11 a.m. Saturday. The Russia has 510 bags of mail for Shanghai, as well as 1,300 tons of cargo and a full passenger list.

The T.K.K. liner Siberia Maru arrived at Woosung yesterday afternoon from Manila and Hongkong, bringing 18 bags of mail. The Siberia sailed last night for San Francisco via Japan ports.

The next mail out for America is by the Admiral line steamer President Madison which will arrive in Shanghai from Manila and Hongkong at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The Madison will dock at the China Merchants' Lower Wharf and will sail for Seattle at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

NOTED FILM STAR PLANS TO MAKE PICTURES HERE

Representative Of Ruth Roland Now Looking Over Shanghai Field

Miss Betty Brownell, personal representative of Ruth Roland, famous screen actress and heroine of the original movie "thrillers" is in Shanghai, at the Astor House. Miss Brownell is in the Orient to look over the field for Miss Roland who intends to come here shortly to make a personal appearance in conjunction with the showing of her newest picture.

The famous screen star, who is at the head of her own company in California and is producing her own pictures, is planning a new serial picture which will be unlike anything yet shown in movies. Each episode in the serial will be complete in itself and will take place in a different country so that the finished picture will be in the nature of a 'round-the-world serial. Miss Brownell, who is herself an actress, having appeared on the stage as well as in pictures, and who has been closely associated in friendship and business with Ruth Roland for fourteen years, said yesterday that she believed China would offer a most promising field for several episodes in the projected enterprise, because of the intense interest in China today.

"Miss Roland," she said, "is anxious to combine thrills with a solid background of educational material so that Americans who are unable to travel abroad will be able to sit comfortably in the movie theaters at home and have the world brought to them on the silver screen. She believes, further, that straight educational pictures of the various industries, customs and manners of the countries of the world can be made much more attractive if there is a real story worked into the fabric of the pictures."

Miss Brownell has already completed arrangements in Honolulu and Japan and is now seriously studying the different phases of the enterprise in Shanghai before proceeding to other parts of China and to India. She is examining manuscripts containing possible plots and ideas which Miss Roland may buy when she comes, and suggested yesterday that she would be glad to look at any scenarios that may be in Shanghai.

Asquith And Baldwin Tell Commons Germany Must Have Security, Too

Should Have Guarantees Equal To Those Given To French, Ex-Premiers Contend In Commons; MacDonald Sees Practical Difficulties In The Way Of U. S. Participation

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons today carefully-worded speeches were made by Mr. Asquith and Mr. Baldwin on the resumption of the Foreign Office estimate debate, with the evident desire not to embarrass the Government on the eve of the inter-Allied conference.

Mr. Asquith urged that any assurance with regard to security that was given to France ought to be part of Britain's general undertaking under the Covenant of the League of Nations; secondly, that similar security should be offered to Germany; and, thirdly, that Germany must be admitted to membership of the League and given a seat on the Council. The Empire should guarantee France and Germany. He emphasised the desirability of consulting the Empire and of carrying it with us in order to achieve the object of the League.

Mr. Baldwin expressed sympathy with Mr. Asquith's argument.

Mr. MacDonald said that the question whether the Dawes report sought to impose on Germany obligations not legally within the interpretation of the Treaty of Versailles would be reported on by the legal experts to the conference.

France, he continued, had come to regard the Treaty of Versailles as something akin to the Ark of the Covenant and any suggestion to put it aside aroused amazing fears. A similar feeling was entertained with regard to any suggested modification of the operations of the Reparation Commission. We must, however, be very careful that France did not extend the legal provisions of the Treaty.

With reference to the probability of American participation, Mr. MacDonald said that practical difficulties alone prevented an official appointment, at present. The only thing clear up to the present was that, if there were going to be an American on the Reparation Commission, France would insist on an extra appointment to it, by reason of the fact that the experts' report could only be put into operation on the floating of a £40,000,000 loan, his duties being confined to safeguarding the creditors. With reference to the alternative arbitration proposal, the Prime Minister said that it must be remembered that the Reparation Agent would have the command of every conceivable particle of information, enabling him to give judgment whether there were wilful default or not.

The language of the White paper had been left purposely vague. The minimum they were seeking was satisfactory security for the creditor. The minimum change would be an American on the Reparation Commission with power to speak and vote when default was being considered. The Spa Agreement would certainly not be reconsidered in London. Mr. MacDonald was very anxious that these questions should not be quarrelled about preliminary to the inter-Allied conference, at which the Dawes report alone would be considered and put into operation.

The Reparation Commission was political rather than judicial. Certainly with regard to the Ruhr the Commission had been scrapped. The subsequent action had been taken not by the Reparation Commission but by the Governments, acting not together but on their own initiative. The Undermining of security by political action was a problem to be faced. Mr. MacDonald took up the position that the creditor should have security which would be satisfactory to him.

The preparation of a program of sanctions would only mean giving Germany a warning of how, in the event of default, she would be punished. Nobody would be so foolish. All they could hope was that the conference, beginning on Wednesday, would be regarded as a opportunity that would not work again, not only for the Allies to reunite, but to unite in the one work of pacifying Europe.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, after a recital of what he described as Mr. MacDonald's errors with a view to their avoidance in future, proceeded to outline a policy which he recommended for the consideration of the Prime Minister. He said that, firstly, they should frankly accept and uphold the Versailles Treaty as the only possible basis of public law in Europe; secondly, they should make the maintenance of the Entente with France a cardinal object of policy and, thirdly, they should make Germany's observance of her obligations a no less cardinal feature and, in return, if Germany accepted and loyally fulfilled the obligation now presented, they should be prepared to respect Germany's integrity and welcome her back to the comity of nations. They should seek to secure the association of the United States wherever possible. He suggested that another

FINE STOP MADE IN PERILOUS FIRE AT DOLLAR WHARF

Sulphur And Explosives Give Pootung Outbreak Grave Aspect

One of the finest pieces of work in the records of the local Fire Department was accomplished Monday night and yesterday morning, when Chief Pett's men stemmed a most threatening outbreak in a chemical filled godown at the Robert Dollar Wharf, Pootung, just about across from the Arsenal. Four foreign firemen, including the Chief, were overcome by gases during the battle.

The fire was noticed about 9:30 p.m. by Mr. F. R. Palmer, the wharf manager. It was in the hazardous goods godown at the west side of the main wharf and already dense clouds of smoke and fumes were pouring through the door. It was at once realised that matters were very serious, for this part of the godown contained a very large quantity of yellow and red phosphorus, with large quantities of acid nearby and with stores of highly explosive material, such as chlorate of potash, in immediate danger of catching.

Most valiant and effective work was carried on by the wharf staff under Mr. Palmer and Mr. Grant during the early stages of the blaze, they bringing the wharf's fire-fighting equipment into play without loss of time and meantime sending a call for assistance to the Shanghai Department. A stiff southeast breeze, carrying suffocating clouds of smoke, hampered the work and frustrated attempts to get into the godown.

Chief Officer Pett, Assistant Station Officer Charters and the first contingent of other Shanghai firefighters sped to the scene by launch and took over the task at a critical moment. They immediately manned the wharf equipment and got to desperate grips with the outbreak, waiting meanwhile for the arrival of the Customs Float with more firemen. The float arrived about two hours after the first contingent. Getting into close quarters in order to head off the flames and prevent explosions and a more terrific spread of the flames, the firefighters quickly suffered casualties. Chief Officer Pett, Assistant Station Officer Charters and Sub-Officers Waterman and Wilson, were badly affected by the fumes, but stuck to their hazardous task throughout the night, until relief arrived at 5 a.m. The first four manipulators of the hose dropped in rapid succession and had to be got away and given restorative treatment.

The Customs float Huning on arrival proved a powerful asset and a big factor in the successful checking of the fire. The bottom of the affected section was flooded up to the sill level and as much phosphorus kept under water as possible. These preventive measures were still being kept up last night and salvage work was being carried on, of which there will be a great deal.

One of the most dangerous of many perilous periods was when during the night a portion of the roof of the chlorate godown got alight. Men fought their way to the roof for intervals—being forced down time and time again—while others, wearing smoke

REBELS PLAN ATTACK ON RIO; CASUALTIES IN NORTH HEAVY

3,000 Killed And Injured In Sao-Paulo

58,000 INVOLVED

Revolutionists And Federals May Clash Soon

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, July 14.—It is reported from Santos that the fighting at Sao Paulo is very desperate. Refugees state that the casualties among troops and civilians amount to 3,000. Hotels have been converted into hospitals and are crowded with the wounded. It is believed that the rebels defending Sao Paulo number 34,000, while the Federal troops there or en route are estimated at 24,000.

(Reuter's American Service)

Buenos Ayres, July 14.—According to news from the frontier, persons arriving at Santos declare that 15,000 rebels at Sao Paulo, who are armed with artillery, are preparing to march on Rio de Janeiro. A Federal detachment of marines has been wiped out. There are 200 wounded in hospitals at Sao Paulo.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Buenos Aires, July 15.—A relayed message from the steamer, Andes, which is leaving Santos, says that the rebels are eight miles from the city. According to other advices the Federal troops continue to shell Pao Paulo but are not doing much damage. Some Federal artillery are reported to have joined the rebels.

THREE MORE MEN TO ARSENAL FOR ARMED ROBBERY

Trio Ordered Executed For Moulmein Road Crime

Three more armed robbers were ordered to the Arsenal for execution by Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Loh of the Mixed Court yesterday.

The three men, together with one not yet in custody, entered premises at 296-297 Moulmein Road on June 7, held up the inmates and got away with property valued at $57. The accused were later arrested by the Chinese authorities and were turned over to the Settlement police. When arrested they were in possession of two automatic pistols, a revolver and ten rounds of ammunition.

Wembley Exhibit To Help Trade, Says J. H. Thomas

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons today at question time Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, said that it was too early to expect definite indications of an increase of the exports of the Crown colonies as a result of their participation in the British Empire Exhibition, but that information in his possession induced the strongest belief that a large increase might be counted upon.

Jamieson Speech Offends Cantonese

Peking, July 12.—Various public bodies in Canton are reported to be demanding an apology from the British Consul-General (Sir James Jamieson), on account of his recent speech in London, and agitating for a boycott of British bank notes issued in Hongkong.

Chief Figures In News Of The Day

Below: HORACE A. GREER & WILLIAM H. REYNOLDS

Horace A. Greer, former chauffeur for Mabel Normand, motion picture actress, has been acquitted in Los Angeles for shooting Courtland S. Dines in a New Year's Eve party attended by the actress. The lovely Mrs. Ida Symington, one of New York's most charming hostesses, has been sued for divorce by Thomas H. Symington, multi-millionaire clubman, and has countered with a suit for $300,000 a year alimony. William H. Reynolds, Mayor of Long Beach, L. I., one of the famous watering places in the East, has been convicted of grand larceny and misuse of the resort's funds. Mrs. Loranda Piccio, Chicago heiress and wife of General Pierre Piccio, Italian "ace" and aviation adviser of the Government, has filed suit for divorce in Paris, demanding the custody of her children and the return of jewels she alleges her husband has taken from her.

U. S. HIGH COURT SUSTAINS WRITS AGAINST SINCLAIR

Six Of Ten Counts In The Indictment Are Upheld

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, July 14.—The Supreme Court of Columbia has sustained six out of the ten counts in the indictment against Mr. Sinclair for contempt of the Senate in connection with the Teapot Dome leases. The Court ruled out questions asked the defendant about alleged contributions of Sinclair stock to someone representing the Republican National Committee as irrelevant.

CANTON REPLIES TO CONSULS' NOTE ON CONSPIRACIES

Promise Made To Round Up All Suspicious Characters

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 12.—The Canton Administration has replied to the communication, sent to them on June 26 by the Consular Body at Canton drawing the attention of the Administration to reports of plots against foreigners in Canton and requesting that the necessary steps be taken for the protection of foreigners there.

The reply states that the Canton Government has in the past been quite friendly to the foreign Powers and their representatives in Canton, and although the names and characters of the persons referred to in connection with the reported plots were not mentioned by the Consular Body, the police have been ordered to take measures for the arrest of all suspects.

In this connection the Canton Government wishes to point out that many conspirators against it are being harbored in districts controlled by Governments which the Consuls in Canton represent. The Canton Government will be very greatly obliged if steps will be taken to control these elements inimical to it.

It is reported that the Canton police have succeeded in locating a place where the manufacture of bombs was being carried on and in arresting five men.

CONTINUATION OF EMPIRE EXHIBIT THOUGHT LIKELY

Wembley Show May Be Carried Through Next Year

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 15.—Although the visitors to the Empire Exhibition average 750,000 a week, bad weather in the earlier months curtailed the anticipated attendance, inclining the authorities to modify the original estimates of 30,000,000 during the season. A movement is afoot to continue the Exhibition next year to enable the heavy Expenditure of the Exhibitors to be spread over two years. The Prince of Wales yesterday supported the movement in a speech in which he declared that he had visited Wembley six or seven times but he did not feel that he had made much headway in seeing it all. Lord Stevenson, the President of the Exhibition Administrative Board, applauded the Prince's suggestion to re-open next year.

Weatherbe Appeal To Be Heard Here

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 12.—The Chinese papers recently reported that Mr. Weatherbe had decided to demand a "retrial" of his case and that it would be heard by the Mixed Court in Shanghai. It was pointed out at the British Legation today that this is incorrect, as Mr. Weatherbe's appeal (not re-trial) is to be heard not by the Mixed Court but by the British Supreme Court in Shanghai.

As the question to be decided is one of law, the attendance of neither the witnesses nor the parties themselves is likely to be necessary, though the latter have the right to appear in person or to be represented by counsel if they wish.

Egypt's Premier In Conciliatory Mood

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons today the Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDnald, replying to Mr. L. R. Lumley (Conservative), said that the Egyptian Premier, Zaghlul Pasha, had expressed readiness to enter into negotiations with the British Government, but that the date of the meeting had not yet been fixed.

(Reuter's Service)

Cairo, July 14.—Documents have been discovered suggesting that the conspiracy against Zaghlul Pasha was hatched in Berlin.

DYKES ABOVE TIENTSIN TO BE SEVERED IF NECESSARY

Chinese Authorities Agree To Make Preparations

KALGAN HARD HIT

500 Dead Is Report Made To Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, July 15.—The Chinese authorities have agreed to make preparations in readiness for cutting the Peiyunho dyke.

The British Municipal Council sent out coolie corps, who worked right through the night strengthening the local dykes.

There has been no more rain. The situation is unchanged.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hankow, July 14.—Communications on the Peking-Hankow railway have been interrupted south of the Yellow River owing to floods.

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Peking, July 15.—Five hundred Chinese lives have been lost and property loss to the extent of $2,000,000 has been occasioned by floods in the Kalgan area, according to latest reports from foreigners in the affected city. This huge property loss is exclusive of damage to railway property. The tunnels of the line are now hopelessly clogged and it is impossible to estimate the extent of the loss.

Hundrds of houses in the environs of Peking have been washed away and in the extreme southeastern portion of the city there is a three-foot depth of standing water. The same conditions prevail in the theater district near the Temple of Heaven.

Officials of the Ministry of Communications report that the Yellow River bridge on the Peking-Hankow Railway line has been seriously damaged and that it is unsafe for use.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 15.—Almost continuous rain for 13 days is causing dangerous floods in North China. The Yungting River is threatening to overflow which would flood Nanyuan and the districts west of Peking.

Traffic on the Peking-Hankow Railway has been suspended owing to washaway. Traffic on the Peking-Suaiyuan Railway has also been stopped.

Telegrams from Kalgan state that the whole city south of the river is severely damaged. The railway line is covered with debris to a depth of three feet. The floors of the houses still standing are covered with four feet of mud. The loss of life is, however, not great. The foreigners are safe. The damage is estimated at $1,000,000.

The dykes in the vicinity of Tientsin appear to be in danger of being carried away which would result in flooding the British, French, Japanese and former German concessions.

New Immigration Ruling Is Likely To Stir Japan Again

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 15. The New York correspondent of the Daily Telegraph foreshadows renewal of the immigration agitation in Japan in consequence of orders issued by the Department of Labour that Japanese residents in Hawaii are barred from admission into continental United States.

Peking Protests On Wanhsien—Affair

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Mr. G. Lansbury (Labor), the Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, said that the Chinese Government had protested against the action and threats of the commander of the Cockchafer at Wanhsien. The question of the publication of the Chinese despatch in this connection would be considered when the full report of the Commander-in-Chief on the affair was received.

SZECHUEN WILL SOON HAVE NEW CIVIL GOVERNOR

Yang Sen Sends Seal Of Office By Messenger To Tong Si-hou

(By Our Own Correspondent)

Chengtu, June 30.—General Teng Si-hou will take on his duties as Civil Governor of Szechuen on July 7. General Yang Sen has sent him the seal. Secretary Ho left two days ago with it. Ho, at the same time, carries a commission with him; he is to try and come to terms with Teng and persuade him, if possible, to come to Chengtu.

Ever since Yang Sen assumed the duties of the Civil Governorship, both Teng Si-hou and Lui Hsiang have been sulking. Neither has interfered with him; but Yang Sen has been out in the cold. In other words, he has found himself unsupported here and unable to put down the robbers at his very door. This is indeed an unenviable position. Now that he has accepted the tuli-ship, he wants Teng to come to Chengtu. It is to be hoped that Teng will come. He seems first to want Yang to met him in Suining, a city half way, and thrash out matter there in a face to face conference. It will be another week or ten days before anything definite is known. He must reach Chungking first and talk things over. He is an ex-secretary of Teng and will be able to take an inside track with him.

Unless Yang and Teng can work together harmoniously, there is small hope of peace in Szechuen. Yang's enemies would soon be on him again. A letter recently was intercepted and published which was written by the ex-Chief of Staff of Lui Yu-liu. It said that the aim of the former regime was to drive out Yang as soon as possible. There is hardly a doubt of the genuineness of the letter and it incriminates not a few who outwardly had submitted to the North. It is high time, therefore, that Yang should bring back his friends. Without their help, he would never have been here, and without their help he cannot stay.

We hear that Prof. J. R. Muir, of the Foreign Language School has been made advisor to Yang Sen. Prof. Muir is an American and well known in Szechuen. Yang is to be congratulated on securing his services.

Messrs. Ballantyne and Kidd, of the Asiatic Petroleum and Standard Oil companies, have both been in the city recently. Owing to robbers on the river near Chenrfu, oil has been scarce here and it went up to $10 per box. Ballantyne forbade the profiteering, but no sooner was his back turned than his men jumped the price again. The Standard Oil agent is looking for a new firm to represent him. The last one was unsatisfactory. The only cure is to have a foreigner here all the time.

Coal, too, is dear at present; the robbers are levying blackmail, it is said, on the boats. The disturbed district is 15 miles away only. It seems a shame for so many thousands of soldiers to be lying idle here and this kind of thing allowed to go on. There is utterly no excuse for it.

helmets invaded the dense fumes of phosphorous smoke, combatting the flames from the under side and checking them there. Meantime large quantities of chlorate stored against the heated walls were removed, wharf coolies aiding the firemen in their dangerous task.

Too much praise cannot be accorded Chief Officer Pett, Officer Charters and the vanguard of Chinese firemen—Nos. 17, 136, 63, 304, 196, 296 and 16—who were first on the job, and high praise is also due to Mr. Palmer and his staff.

In godown K, where the fire started, were stored yellow and amorphous phosphorus, sulphuric acid, films, calcium carbide and caustic soda. About two-thirds of the contents of this godown are believed to have been saved.

In godown L were 5,300 casks of chlorate of potash—about 275 tons. A ventilating opening between these two godowns was one of the biggest hazards in the fight, fire sweeping through this opening and igniting the wood underportion of godown L's roof, the planks falling upon casks of chlorate of potash. It was here that the most desperate stand was made—successfully.

As things stood last night practically all of the damage had been confined to the phosphorus section, and members of the Brikade were still at work.

China Needs More Railways And Better Irrigation, Says Julean Arnold To Pressmen

Mr. Julean Arnold, United States Commercial Attache, was host at a dinner given in honor of local Chinese journalists last night at the Union Club. In a lengthy speech, in which he told of the work being carried out here by the Department of Commerce, Mr. Arnold pointed out the importance of the use of moving pictures as an educational vehicle and of the development of the economic system in China for the salvation of the country.

On the question of economic development, Mr. Arnold considered the construction of railways and the improvement of irrigation as most essential to the problem and pointed to the province of Shansi, which had enjoyed political peace and order for the last decade but has failed in these two aspects, as his example. Shansi has plenty of water in the form of rivers, canals, artisan wells and springs. But it is suffering from drought, but no one is looking after irrigation and the method of conserving surplus water for use in time of need. Shansi lacks railways, so its rich minerals and raw products are left untapped. The speaker pointed out the misconception of good roads in China, which, he considers, secondary in importance to railroads. Shansi has 2,300 of good motor roads, but the highways are not used because transportation by motor trucks is higher by 50 percent than the old fashioned mule-cart freight. Good roads are necessary, Mr. Arnold said, but they only serve as feeders to the railways.

Mr. Arnold believed that when the economic situation improves, the political educational problems will take care of themselves and asserted that "Railways will build Schools but schools will not build railroads. He concluded by asking his audience not to hesitate to ask for foreign help when assistance is required. He advised the Chinese to analyse the statement of Andrew Carnegie that he made his money out of the brains of others, and apply the words for their own benefit. The United States has ulterior motives or political designs in China, he said. She is only interested in the development of commerce with this country. At present, she is buying twice from China as she is selling to her and does mind it all. She needs the raw products of minerals from China, but she cannot get them until the nation has better transportation.

Mr. Zao Zoong-hui of the Republican Daily News responded on behalf of the guests and endorsed the points made by the host.

Asquith And Baldwin Say Germany Must Have Security Too

Dawes Committee, appointed by the Reparation Commission, might be a hopeful way of securing the results desired.

The Foreign Office vote was eventually agreed to and the debate terminated.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, July 14.—M. Herriot, General Degoutte and several well-known personages will leave Paris tomorrow for London.

Mr. Lloyd George in the course of a speech at a Liberal meeting violently attacked the Conservatives. He declared that the Conservatives had permitted France to enter the Ruhr, which was the origin of Europe's.

He also criticised the fiscal policy of the Conservatives and their foreign policy towards Europe and America.

The British press, commenting on the reply made by M. Herriot to M. Poincare's speech, approves the Premier's statements, but makes certain reservations on the subject of the competence of the Reparations Commission and the eventual sanctions against the Reich, on which France and Britain have different ideas.

An important demonstration of German Republicans took place yesterday at Mayence. Six thousand people applauded the Socialist deputy, Herr Breusheld, who declared that German pacifists must work for reconciliation between France and Germany. The meeting passed a resolution of respect for economic independence, which would procure for the two countries the security to which they were entitled.

In the course of a speech the German Chancellor, Hefr Marx, demanded that Germany should be represented at the London conference.

Obituary

CAPT. J. H. PARKER

His many friends in Shanghai learned with deep regret yesterday of the death on Monday at Mokanshan of Captain J. H. P. Parker, one of Shanghai's oldest residents and well-known in other parts of China. Captain Parker was believed to be in his usual good health, friends here having heard from him within the past few days. He had been spending the summer in his cottage at Mokanshan, having left his home here, at 125 North Szechuen Road, last month.

Captain Parker, who was 82 years of age, came to the East first some sixty years ago, being at that time engaged in serving his apprenticeship on a sailing vessel. For some years he called at Shanghai in sailing ships and later was master of vessels owned by Butterfield and Swire. Later he became senior partner in firm of Parker and Riley, marine surveyors, and remained in active business until his retirement two or three years ago.

Captain Parker was a member of the Shanghai Race Club and prominent in Masonic circles here. He was at one time a member of the Doric Lodge, Chekiang, and in 1872 was Master of the Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 501, E. C., Shanghai. He enjoyed a wide circle of friends and was ever a popular figure.

The body is to be brought to Shanghai for burial.

DR. GEORGE CANDLIN

A tragedy which resulted in the death of Dr. George Candlin, occurred at West End, Peitaiho, on Friday, says the North China Star. Dr. Candlin was bathing and fainted whilst in the water. He suffered from a paralytic stroke previous to his arrival in Peitaiho and the physicians surmise that he probably had a reoccurrence while in the water. Dr. McClure, a local physician was present at the time of the accident, and administered artificial respiration prior to the arrival of Dr. Ethel Leonard, but Dr. Candlin was beyond all hope of recovery. Mrs. McGregor Gibbs and children, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Candlin, were present at the time of the sad occurrence.

Dr. Candlin was seventy-two years old, of which, thirty-nine have been spent in various parts of China. He came to the Orient in connection with the Methodist Mission.

Dr. Candlin whose wife died some ten years ago, leaves three sons and two daughters. Mrs. Olive Skimm is at present in England and Mrs. Young, the wife of Dr. Young, is in Manchuria.

The eldest son George is with the Russian Bank at Shanghai, another son is engaged with the firm of Forbes and Co., of Tientsin.

The youngest son Mr. Hugh Candlin, has recently returned from England where he was completing his education.

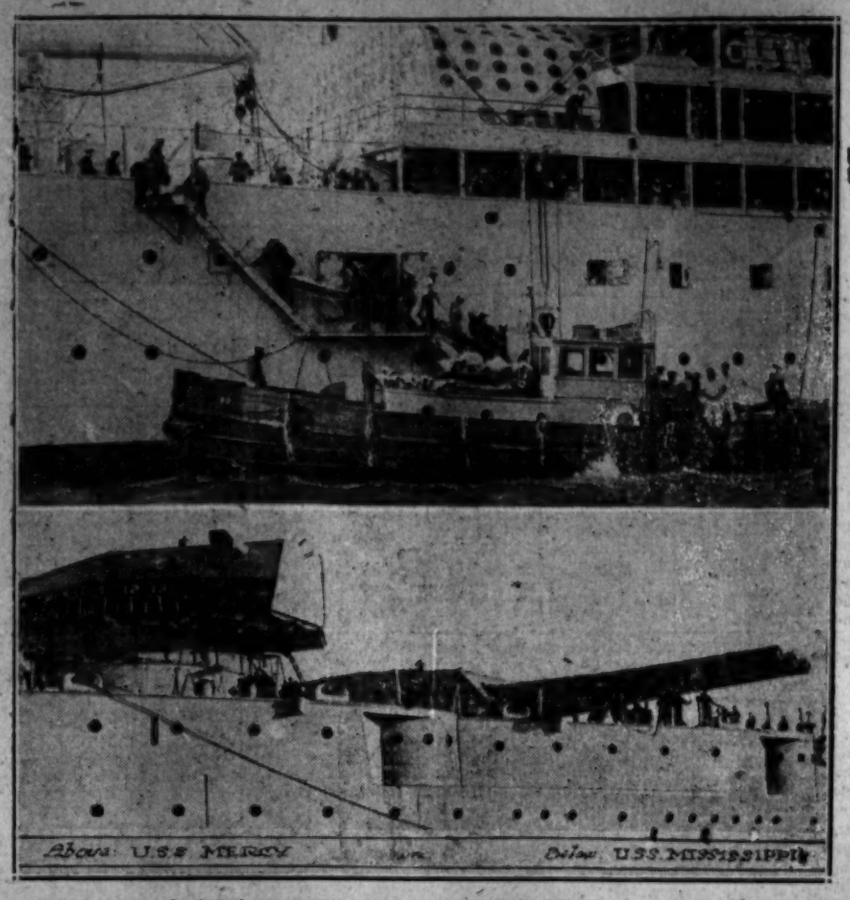
VISCOUNT KURODA

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 15.—The death is announced of Viscount Kuroda at the age of 58.

Viscount Kuroda was a political leader in the House of Peers and was wellknown in French art circles.

WHERE 48 DIED ON BATTLESHIP MISSISSIPPI.



Here is pictured the 14-inch gun turret of the super-dreadnaught Mississippi, where 48 officers and enlisted men were burned and suffocated to death by a fire in powder bags during target practice near Los Angeles. No material damage can be noted on the outside of the turret. The other view shows the dead and injured being carried aboard the hospital ship Mercy in San Pedro Harbor, California.

Military Band In Chihli Converted To Methodist Church

(China Press Correspondence)

Lanhsien, Chihli, July 12.—The military band of over 30 members, and the wireless squad of 50 men, of the Fifteenth Chihli Division stationed at Lanhsien, have all joined the Methodist church and are receiving daily instruction in the Bible and the principles of Christian living.

The appearance, equipment and conduct of the men in this division is a splendid surprise after contact with the usual rabble of Chinese soldiery. This is the division that bore the brunt of the fighting near Shanhaikuan during the Chihli-Fengtien war two years ago. It was badly decimated and has been filled up since with choice young fellows, many of the former veterans becoming officers in the newly reorganised division.

The members of the Band and Wireless Squad are all graduates of Intermediate School, and are carrying on aggressive work with Thousand Character text-books among their illiterate fellows in the army.

Comparison

It is obvious that where claims are made, comparison is inevitable. Comparison of the NEW Columbia Grafonola with ordinary gramophones has given it a place in music that no other gramophone has attained in so short a space of time. Comparison of the "NEW PROCESS" Records (without Scratch) with ordinary records reveals all the deficiencies of the latter.

To hear either one is to enjoy but one-half of a great achievement. To hear them in combination is to experience the sensation of a new experience. But to hear them in comparison with ordinary gramophones is to understand the enthusiasm of master musicians and music-lovers alike.

SOUTH AFRICANS SHOW WELL IN 3'D TEST MATCH

Get 232 For Four Wickets; Taylor And Catterall Do Well

(Reuter's Service)

Headingley, July 14.—The Third Test Match was resumed today in fine, cool weather. Three thousand people were present. The wicket was excellent. The South Africans were all out for 132 by 1.5 p.m. Taylor made the highest score of 59 not out. He gave a fine exhibition of clean cutting and driving, and hit one 6 and five 4s in his innings of 100 minutes.

The visitors followed on, Commaille and Ward being in partnership with the score at 6 for 0 wicket at the lunch interval.

After lunch Commaille batted patiently, but was stumped by Wood at 31. He was in for 100 minutes and hit five 4s.

The fourth wicket fell for 135, but then Taylor and Catterall made an excellent stand, both hitting all round. Taylor reached his 50 in 114 minutes and Catterall his in 65 minutes. When stumps were drawn, the score stood at 232 for 4 wickets, Taylor and Catterall both having made 54 not out.

SEMI-FINAL IN TENNIS DOUBLES THIS AFTERNOON

Will Decide Pairs For Hong Championship To Be Played Friday

The semi-finals in the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association Hong Doubles Championship will take place at the Majestic Hotel courts this afternoon, beginning at 5 o'clock, when some keen matches are assured.

In today's matches Capt. E. J. M. Barrett and Major K. M. Bourne, of the Shanghai Municipal Police, will meet Messrs. J. L. Wade and H. Collaco, of Probst, Hanbury and Co., Ltd., and Messrs. H. B. Ollerdessen and A. H. Hatherly, of the Shanghai Stock Exchange, meet Messrs. J. P. Hawes and C. Sofoulis, of the Standard Oil. Messrs. Barrett and Bourne came into the semi-finals yesterday when they defeated the Yokohama Specie Bank pair, Messrs. L. B. Barrera and Y. Kuramochi, 6-0, 6-1.

The finals in the Hong Doubles Championship will take place at the Majestic Hotel grounds Friday afternoon, beginning at 4:30 sharp. Best of 5 sets.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIPS

Considerable interest is being taken in the "Junior Championships" played by school students under the auspices of the Lawn Tennis Association.

Yesterday the championship for students under 15 years was decided, the Shanghai Public School pair—Berents and Benevitch taking the honors.

The finals in the major division—students over 15—will be played at 5 p.m. tomorrow at the Majestic grounds, when pairs representing the Shanghai Public School and the Shanghai American School will meet. Berents and Hutchins will represent the Public School and Hager and Carleton the American institution.

GALLOPERS ON LONG END WITH SAILORS, 8-5

Locals Take Practice Game, Using Second String Man

The Gallopers defeated the Asheville again yesterday in a practice game at the ball park the Shanghai team being made up almost entirely of second string men, including Thurman Hyde, who stole a base. Scott and Barnes pitched for the Gallopers and held the sailors back in all except the second inning, when they got four runs.

INT'L SWIMMING CLUB HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

Late Start Due To Inclement Weather; But Will Be Active Now

The Shanghai International Swimming Club held its annual general meeting on Tuesday and the following Committee was elected for the season:

President, Athelstone Hill; Vice-President, J. H. Macgregor; Captain, T. O. Rourke; Vice-Captain, J. Iordy; Secretary and Treasurer, G. V. Jensen.

Committee: W. I. Hamlin, C. Encarnacao, N. J. Hughes, W. Jones, C. Jensen, C. J. Langley.

The retiring officers were:

President, Dr. C. Noel Davies; Vice-President, J. H. Macgregor; Captain, C. I. Encarnacao; Vice-Captain, F. A. Remedios; Secretary and Treasurer, G. V. Jensen.

Committee: C. J. Langley, N. J. Hughes, F. J. Schlager, G. J. Hendricksen, F. W. Golding.

The reason for the late start this season is due to the inclement weather. The club, which was the first Swimming Club started in Shanghai, has always been able to show up well in this delightful sport, especially water polo. They regret having lost a good all-rounder in C. H. (Baby) Siemsen who left for the States in the early part of the year, but a lot of new Swimmers have been introduced into the club and they hope more will be heard of them later on.

The usual weekly Gala was held on Friday, June 11 and ended with an interesting game of water-polo. It was a scrappy game with flashes of very good play at times. O'Rourke and Tordy were the outstanding players for their respective sides. The final score was:

Blues.....6 Whites.....4

The Club intends holding its usual Tuesday and Friday meets at the closed Tank, on which nights the bath will be opened to members and their friends.

Singapore Base Material 'Ads' Are Subject Of Debate

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 15.—In the House of Lords today the Marquess of Linlithgow drew attention to advertisements appearing in the Straits Settlements newspapers of Singapore base material. He said that such advertisements caused concern in Britain and the Dominions because it had been understood that the Government's decision was not final.

Viscount Chelmsford, the first Lord of the Admiralty, stated that the advertisement did not indicate a change of policy. The material could be replaced from home in a few weeks if necessary. The Government were actively considering the best means of applying the Prime Minister's general pacific policy.

No Further Excitement But Watchful Eye Is Kept

There was no further excitement in the neighborhood of the Russian Consulate buildings yesterday, though the police kept an eye on the district and were prepared in case of emergency.

It is now stated that the official turning over of the property to the Soviet representatives, scheduled for yesterday, will not take place until next week, probably on the 24th. In the meantime the Bureau of Russian Affairs will be closed and those in charge will be engaged in winding up affairs in preparation for the transfer.

RHODE ISLAND LEGISLATORS IN POISON GAS WAR.

GOV. W. L. FLYNN, SEN. AUSTIN, SEN. POWERS & LIEUT. GOV. TOUPIN & RHODE ISLAND CAPITOL

Although the Democrats carried the State of Rhode Island, the Republicans held a majority in the Senate because of an old law which allows all cities one Senator. In a filibuster led by Lieutenant-Governor Toupin to change the law, the feeling became so bitter poison gas was emitted in the Senate Chamber in the Capitol. Governor William L. Flynn ordered arrests, but the culprits were not found. Senator Fred Austin, of Smithfield, and Senator John Powers, of Cumberland, are shown in conference with Lieutenant-Governor Toupin in an unsuccessful effort to end the filibus' r.

Kobe Foreigners In Protest To Tax

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 15.—A meeting of the foreign community of Kobe today passed a resolution of protest against the Luxuries Tariff Bill which it views with alarm and anxiety. The opinion was expressed that such a measure would render maintenance of the European standard of living in Japan impossible, would increase the cost of living on every side by increasing the cost of imports as well as of domestic manufactures and would seriously damage Japan's trade.

"Bigotine" was widely advertised by means of cuts depicting a Filipino with lip foliage a la Pancho Villa, and the dashing estudiantes were the principal customers. When, however, the mixture proved to be productive of nothing but blisters the discouraged inventor stepped aboard a transport and up to date has not returned.

The medical correspondent of the London Times says that the craving for miracles by the public is probably the greatest hindrance to medical progress. "This craving," he says, "feeds on electric shocks, mysterious apparatus, wires, rays, crackling sparks, strange lights, and the paraphernalia of the baser sort of 'vaccine merchants.' Thus disgusting quackery is palmed off as science—to the confusion of the scientific men. Medical progress, after all, as he says, is really nothing more than progress in knowledge of how the body heals itself and how that process may be assisted.

Pershing Plans Defense Test

Country Wide Army Demonstration On St. Mihiel Day

On the thirteenth of next September, General John J. Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces and, by special act of Congress, the General of the Armies of the United States, will cease to be an active officer of the new army, in the making of which he has been the controlling force. On that day General Pershing will be 64 years of age and, under the law, will automatically be transferred from the active to the retired list.

With the day of his retirement drawing near, the question is frequently asked: What will be General Pershing's monument?

"His place in history as leader of the American Army in France," is the usual reply.

"The Organised Reserves of the United States and the new army," say his associates in the War Department.

One of General Pershing's friends, a man who served with him in France, remarked the other day that, secure as Pershing is in history as one of the great allied chieftains, the outstanding achievements of his career is his work in building up, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, the present military organisation of the United States, with the regular service, the National Guard and the Organised Reserves, closely and harmoniously welded together.

ON ST. MIHIEL DAY

In view of this remark, significance will be seen in formal announcement at the War Department that the President had approved the proposal for a country-wide demonstration of national defense plans to be held Sept. 12. For this "Defense Test" will occur the day before General Pershing is due to retire and on the sixth anniversary of the Battle of St. Mihiel.

It would be hard to conceive of a more appropriate date for displaying the mobilisation plans of the new army than Sept. 12, because St. Mihiel marks the first time that the American Army as an independent and composite unit under American command took the field in France. Previous to St. Mihiel, American divisions had parts in operations with French and British units and under the command of allied Generals.

"The defense test," said General Pershing the other day, "will explain what preparation for national defense means. It is to be a day during which every one will learn his place should our security be threatened. Our plans are not secret and we propose to afford the people an opportunity to become familiar with them. This test will be a tryout for our small regular army forces and the National Guard, but more especially will it show the preliminary steps required for the prompt utilisation of our large reserve force of patriotic citizens."

Further plans will be announced later by the War Department for the "defense test." It will involve each of the nine corps areas into which the nation is divided and its fundamental purpose will be to illustrate the principle of local organisation fostered by the War Department.

Naturally the question arises as to what is this new army of the United States. That question was put to General Pershing, and at his direction the following outline of the new military system was prepared:

"The present army of the United States is different from any other army which we have had in the past. Formerly we depended upon a small regular army, upon various units of the National Guard and upon what the statutes used to call the 'unorganised militia.' As a result of our World War experience Congress enacted the National Defense act of 1920, providing for a single army of the United States with three components—the regular army, the National Guard and the Organised Reserves. It prescribed that the various components of the army should be organised into tactical units and that peace-time units should be arranged as the basis of a complete and immediate mobilisation. This is the governing principle underlying our present organisation.

"Under that act the country is divided into nine corps areas, to each of which are allotted one regular, two National Guard and three reserve divisions. After conducting intensive studies into the military effort which might be required in the event of a future war of any magnitude it was determined that we should possibly be required to put 2,000,000 men into the field in our initial mobilisation.

"In the regular army we now have 135,366 officers and enlisted men, including 1,102 cadets at West Point. Of the number more than 33,000 men are outside the continental limits of the United States, in the Philippines, Panama and Hawaii. The regular army, however, is not merely a garrison force; it is primarily a training nucleus.

"The distribution of the regular forces and their duties may be indicated by the distribution of 11,450 regular officers. This number includes 3,026 belonging to such noncombatant branches as the Quartermaster Corps, Adjutant General's Department, Corps of Engineers and the finance department. Of the remaining 8,424 combat officers 1,503 are overseas, and thus we have in the continental limits of the United States only 6,921 regular officers holding commissions in combatant branches.

"The activities of regular army officers are not limited to the regular army. They belong in the broadest sense to the Army of the United States as a whole. For example, during the Summer months practically every combat officer in the army on duty with troops attends one of the Summer encampments with his unit and serves as instructor in the citizens' military training camps, in the reserve officers' training corps camps, or in the Organised Reserves camps. The officers are the specialist instructors in combat principles and training. The regular army depends upon them for its morale, training and discipline; the National Guard for its military doctrine, regulations and instruction; the Organised Reserves, the military units in our schools and colleges and our citizen training camps for their maintenance and efficiency.

"The present strength of the National Guard totals 164,856 officers and enlisted men. By supporting their various guard units the several States have maintained and kept in training local organisations, ready for the emergency call of the Federal Government. It is thus that we provide that 'well regulated militia' which our Constitution says is essential to the security of a free State. The National Guard is ready to take the field alongside the regulars and defend the critical portions of the country against an enemy advance until the large man-power of the country can be mobilised, trained and concentrated for active operations.

"When we next go to war we shall not have a mass of miscellaneous and unrelated units. Adjutants-General and other officers of the National Guard have attended conferences in Corps Area localities and in Washington with the regular staff and have adjusted their administration and their organisation so as to fit easily and readily into that complete and immediate mobilisation which the National Defense act contemplates.

"Yet the hundred thousand regulars in the continental limits of the United States and the 164,000 Guardsmen would not make up the two million that might be needed in a future national crisis. Under the act of 1920, there have accordingly been organised about 80,000 reserve officers. In the beginning these were veterans of the World War. Gradually, as they become too old for military service, they are being replaced by younger men trained in the Reserve Officers Training Corps units in the schools and colleges and in the Citizens' Military Training Camps. These are organised in tactical groups representing the staffs and troop leaders of the National Armies' of the future. Some of them are assigned to special details, for which their peace-time occupations especially fit them.

"The reserve officers are at present allotted as follows:

General assignment (staff specialists)	158
Assignment by chiefs of branches (staff specialists)	12,235
Territorial Assignments; With organised Reserve divisions	59,845
With regular army units	166
With National Guard units	5,599

"In time of war the reservists will compose 93.6 percent of all the officers with the first nine divisions of the regulars. In addition, the reservists are assigned to reserve divisions, twenty-seven infantry divisions reconstructed under the names and with the traditions of the famous combat divisions of the World War, and to six cavalry divisions. The officer personnel of the infantry divisions is now 79.9 percent complete, and of the cavalry divisions 84 percent complete. In the event of a war, these trained officers could immediately begin filling their ranks to strength and training their recruits.

"Suppose our company commander is living in Washington. Members of the Kingston community will answer the call for volunteers and enroll in the local company of the reserves, Company M of the 308th Infantry. They will assemble amid familiar scenes and near their homes. At the same time others will be making up the companies of the same battalion at Newburgh Middletown and Poughkeepsie. When the time for concentration comes, they will all join their battalion headquarters, of the third battalion at Poughkeepsie.

JOIN HEADQUARTERS

"When the battalion is assembled, equipped and ready to move, it will proceed to New York to join the regimental headquarters in the Bronx. The first battalion has been got together in the Bronx, the second battalion at Yonkers from companies assigned to Yonkers, New Rochelle, Mount Vernon and Peekskill. The three battalions make up the 308th Regiment of Infantry, which is in turn trained as a regiment and then combined with the 307th Regiment organised from various portions of Manhattan Island. The combination of the 307th and 308th Regiments forms the 124th Infantry Brigade.

"At the same time this has been going on, the 153d Infantry Brigade has likewise been formed in the same way, from the 305th Infantry in Brooklyn, part of Manhattan and Staten Island, and

"JUDGMENT OF THE STORM"

The best snow storm scenes since "Way Down East" are pictured here and if you think you have viewed blizzards, well, you ain't seen nothin' yet" Heart interest has been built into this feature from beginning to end.

There is more entertainment in this picture than in several productions you've seen that cost close to the million point and once seen are soon forgotten. This picture did not cost a million dollars and does not rely on elaborate settings to put it over. It has a plot that is off the beaten path, a plot which has so much "meat" that it has a punch in each reel big enough for the climax of several ordinary photoplays.

"JUDGMENT of the STORM"

Pershing Plans Defence Test

from the 306th Infantry in Flushing, Hempstead, Patchogue, a part of Brooklyn and Long Island in general. There has also been formed a Field Artillery Brigade, and such special units in the way of engineer, signal, medical, quarter-master, finance and transport troops as a division needs.

"In this way the Seventy-seventh Division is reconstituted. It has the records of its achievements in the World War. It contains many of the veterans of that division who covered themselves with honor in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, operating in the difficult left of that advance. These veterans have passed on the traditions and experience of the World War to the more newly commissioned reservists who have joined direct from schools and training units. Its officers have been meeting occasionally to study military problems. Some of them have attended special service schools and perfected themselves in the application of military principles in practice. Some have instructed themselves by taking correspondence course. All have been in close contact with regular army officers who have maintained at the headquarters of the division. Today, in time of peace, the division has 89 percent of its trained officer strength.

A NATION WIDE PLAN

"The Seventy-seventh is only an example of what the organisation of the reserves all over the country has been. In each of the nine corps areas there are reserve divisions ready to start their work of actual training of troops without the necessity of waiting for the preliminary planning of new divisions or the preliminary training of officers in hurried three-months war-time camps.

"Our main dependence is plainly upon the citizen rising to a call to arms when the emergency is declared by Congress. The entire system of organisation and control is decentralised in character and depends upon the effective co-ordination of community efforts. There is no taint of militarism in the system. There is no possibility of any "goose-step" militarism. We have not the caste system which prevailed in many European armies. Nor have we permitted the military to get out of the control of the people. We organise in the way we do and demonstrate our process of organisation and mobilisation in order to make plain the effective steps and the many forms of co-operation in which the people will take part. They should know in advance what the agencies will be that will direct their energies and efforts. A public knowledge of the essential steps is necessary for smoothness of operation and clear understanding.

"The plans for the creation of this organisation of citizens are now approximately complete. They have been projected and put into effect without advertisement. Yet such is the state of mind of some pacifists who deplore even such a slight degree of preparedness as we maintain today, that the modest and quiet manner of planning this organisation has been attacked as a secret attempt to foist militarism on the country. On the contrary, the chief object of the War Department is to make the plans for future efforts entirely public, so that the people may judge if the means are appropriate to their intentions, and so that the individual citizens and the civil agencies may know what steps they would need to take in time of emergency."

200 Houses Burn In Hangchow Fire

(China Press Correspondence)

Hangchow, July 11.—Twice last night the city was disturbed by the fire alarm, and fires in two sections of the city destroyed more than two hundred houses and in one took a toll of three lives, one of them a baby three days old. The first fire came at ten o'clock and burned for a short block on two sides of the Yien Gyao Street, the horse road which leads from the city station to the model city on West Lake, near the bridge which gives the street its name.

The second fire broke out at four o'clock in the morning on the Yien Gyao Street, and it was in this one that the three lost their lives. A strong wind was blowing and made both fires more dangerous. The high mud walls combined with the efforts of local fire companies fortunately held both fires within comparatively small areas. The fires mean a widening of the streets in both cases, and will add considerably to the lengths of broad streets within the city. Both of the burned districts are being rapidly cleared of their debris, and in the way characteristic of the people new and better structures will quickly rise on the old sites.

The first fire was between the modern silver shops which are one of the sights of Hangchow on one side and the recently finished and dedicated new building of the National Bank of China, the handsomest building in the city, on the other side. It is a section of modern buildings, and others of the same type will probably go up on the burned district, thus adding to the smart and up-to-date appearance of the district.

Books And So Forth

By Frederic F. Van de Water (F. F. V.)

The person who sets out to write autobiography must regard himself, or so it seems to us, either as a hero or a reporter. He must tell of what he has brought to existence, or else, what life has presented to him. In theory, it appears that the former is the better way. How life has felt to James Jones or John Smith is, we think, the rarest and most precious stuff in literature. So rare it is that we find it, when we find it at all, in the most diluted and adulterated form. Usually, when people begin to tell others how it has felt to live, they lie persistently, shamelessly, both by omission and commission. Autobiography of which you, yourself, are the hero, is your one chance to show yourself to the world as you like to think you might have been. Nine out of ten self-told life stories are like that.

Out of every thousand or so books, one may hope to come upon the autobiographer who considers himself less a hero than a reporter; who has been more interested in what other people he has known have done than in what he has accomplished himself. Newspaper men, quite naturally, frequently write of their lives from this point of attack. Actors do so rarely. Yet the best book of reminiscences that has come into our hands in weary months is the work of a great actor, Otis Skinner, who is only a minor character in his own life story, "Footlights and Spotlights" (Bobbs Merrill).

We can detect in Mr. Skinner's book no symptom of that conscious self-depreciation which seems to us the acme of egotism. To all appearances, he has gone through life more interested in the play than in the not inconsiderable part he has acted therein. Concerning Otis Skinner the 354 pages of "Footlights and Spotlights" contain little of importance, beyond anecdote, that "Who's Who" does not hold. Concerning the kaleidoscope of the stage which he has known for forty-six years, the book is filled with brilliance and color.

Booth and Barrett, McCullough and Maurice Barrymore, Mary Anderson and Fanny Devenport, Modjeska and Janauschek and practically all of the more modern gods and goddesses of the stage appear in Mr. Skinner's book, each clearly outlined and almost all of them trailing clouds of anecdote both vivid and amusing. The author's picture of Booth is the most sympathetic, human and impressive that we have read.

Throughout the book, the echo of popular applause for Otis Skinner is conspicuously absent. Only twice does the author mention popular favorable comment upon his work; once in connection with Thomas Nast and again in an anecdote of William Winter. Record of his greatest successes, early and late, only inpires stories of stage accidents, or laughable or dramatic occurrences, all wholly foreign to his interpretation of his part. Not the least humorous of the hundreds such as the book contains is the story of the non-equestrian dispatch rider in "Shenandoah," who was supposed to fling himself from his well dusted and lathered steed, rush up to Mr. Skinner and Frank Burbeck and deliver the papers.

"This afternoon," Mr. Skinner says, "Burbeck and I had finished our scene and awaited the hurried arrival of the mounted corporal. In the wings we could see the weary beast being urged by the timid rider, but with no result. Finally, the property man came to his assistance with a generous slap on the flank. The horse leaned forward, dashed across the scene, caught a glimpse of daylight through the open door of the alley, and when horse and rider were rescued they were tearing along State Street. Burbeck turned blandly to me, saying: 'That must have been the corporal riding by.'"

It is astonishing to find any one who has been an actor for forty-six years and a star for half that period more interested in other persons than himself and so adept in putting words on paper. "Footlights and Spotlights" could not have been better if Mr. Skinner had forborne to touch a pen and had turned over his memory to the best of the professional aids to autobiographers for public presentation.

The book runs smoothly and pleasantly. There is tremendous striving after effect, no moralizing. It is a gracefully told record of the usually genial folks who have come into the long and active life of a graceful and genial man. To those who come closer to the stage than a seat check brings them, "Footlights and Spotlights" should be a valuable book of reference. To those of us who read in the hope of amusement Mr. Skinner's book guarantees fulfillment of that hope. It is no exaggeration, we believe, to say that it does not contain a single dull page.

What little philosophizing "Footlights and Spotlights" contains comes at its end and is inspiring and kindly. Mr. Skinner, who played with Booth and Barrett, finds in the present stage no inspiration for windy sighs over the good old days.

"More imagination and originality," he says, "are going into work of playwriting. Dramatic workshops are being introduced into colleges. Little theaters are springing up over the land and in some of the young actors recruited to the professional stage I see a great and glorious hope."

He sums up his professional career as follows: "I find that I have played in all, three hundred and twenty-five parts; have appeared in sixteen plays of Shakespeare, acting therein, at various times, thirty-eight parts, and I have produced under my own direction thirty-three plays."

It is rather a pity that he has done only one book.

'Smilin' Through' Film Attraction At New Theater

Patrons of the cinema are offered an unusual treat in the presentation, starting tonight, at the Alhambra Open-Air Theater, 119 Range Road, of Norma Talmadge in her greatest film success, "Smilin' Through."

"Smilin' Through" is an adaptation of the stage play of the same name. It has been widely acclaimed by critics everywhere as the best picture which Norma Talmadge has ever made and one of the real master-works of the screen. It will be shown for four days at the Alhambra.

PIECE GOODS FROM SOVIET RUSSIA SOON TO APPEAR

Cotton Textile Is Making Very Rapid Progress

ADOPT PROGRAM

Trusts Are Formed To Develop Export Business

Apparently Soviet Russia will succeed in re-establishing the once-important cotton textile industry of the country in 1924-25, and then the appearance of Russian piece goods in the China market is expected. Before the world war, Russia ranked fourth among the nations in cotton manufacture.

The total production program for 1923-24 is based on the consumption of 400,000 bales of raw cotton and contemplates the concentration of the entire production into 65 mills. It is estimated that the output will be about 1,190,000,000 yards of finished goods. The Central Cotton Committee is attempting to double the area of cotton under cultivation, bringing the total up to 1,000,000 acres.

"The prospects of the development of cotton exports in Russia, which were resumed in 1923, hinge on two factors, the demand of the Russian cotton manufacturing industry and the revival of the Russian cotton-growing industry," declares L. J. Lewery, of the United States Department of Commerce. Both are closely interlinked with the entire problem of all nationalised industry by the Soviet Government side by side with the independent agricultural industry.

RECOVERY IS STRIKING

"The recovery of cotton-growing has been quite striking and in line with agricultural production in general. It has far outstripped industrial production. If the growth of cotton production in Russia should keep the pace set during 1923, without a corresponding progress in the cotton manufacturing industry, the country may be confronted with a surplus of the raw material before many years."

The cotton textile industry of Soviet Russia is organised into 21 state "trusts," or regional combines of mills under central control of the All Russian Textile Syndicate, whose functions consist of supplying the "trusts" with the necessary raw material and marketing their products. These "trusts" comprise 180 cotton mills with a total of 6,400,000 spindles, or 88 percent of the total number of spindles in place in Russia: and 140,000 looms, representing 79 percent of the total.

At the beginning of 1923, 126 mills of the above number, organised into "trusts," were in operation, with 1,600,000 spindles or 25 percent of the total spindleage controlled by the "trusts," and 52,700 looms or 37 percent of the total in the syndicated industry. Since that time the number of operating mills has been subjected to systematic curtailment in a series of shut-downs resulting from the policy of concentration.

At the end of September, 1923, the number of spindles in operation was 1,452,000 and the number of looms, 47,350. The last systematic curtailment in October, 1923, shut down 28 mills with 138,000 spindles out of 1,452,000 then in operation, and 5,445 blooms out of 47,350 active at the time. The 28 mills employed 21,515 hands. The number of "trusts" also will be curtailed from 21 to 19.

OPERATE INTENSIVELY

The activity of the operating mills at the beginning of 1923 ranged between 10 and 90 percent of capacity, with the majority of the mills operating at 20 to 30 percent capacity. With the shut-downs and the elimination of the least productive mills, those remaining were operated more intensively.

The output of the Russian cotton mills in 1923 amounted to 170,765,000 pounds of cotton yarn, and 663,745,000 yards of cotton cloth.

The home production of raw cotton was not sufficient for the rapidly developing manufacturing industry in the pre-war days, and more than half of the raw cotton consumed was imported from abroad. Commencing with 1891, the imports grew year by year, reaching 884,200 bales, valued at 116,788,000 gold rubles in 1911. Notwithstanding the increase in imports, the relative importance of foreign cotton in the Russian textile industry declined with the concomitant development of the Turkestan cotton-growing industry. The average annual imports for the [illegible] bales of [illegible] pounds gross, valued at 110,251,000 rubles, or about $55,000,000 (gold). The average annual amount of cotton imported from the United States during the period was 387,000 bales, and from China, [illegible]

Oil Development Work Being Carried On On Big Scale Below The Equator

"Farthest South" Field Located In Argentina, 1,000 Miles Below Buenos Aires; Held By Government

With the production of crude oil sliding off gradually in America and with consumption mounting steadily as a result of the constant increase in the number of motor cars and trucks in operation, American producers are casting their eyes to South American and other foreign countries for future sources of supply. Development work is being carried on on a large scale in the South American countries at present. Most of this work is being undertaken by private interests, but in Argentina the development of the principal producing fields is controlled and financed by the Government. An interesing review of the development in that country is contained in The Lamp, the official organ of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Commenting upon the developments in Argentina, the company says that "the oil field of Comodoro Rivadavia in the Argentine Republic has several features which make it one of the most unique in the world. Its situation, the chance nature of its discovery, its ownership and the method of operation are all distinctive. It has the honor of being the most southern oil field in the world, a distinction it is likely to retain for a long time, for apparently the only chance of developing more southern fields must be further down on the American Continent, a region already tested by a half-dozch dry holes, and proved geologically unfavorable.

"The Port of Comodoro Rivadavia, located a thousand miles south of Buenos Aires, before the discovery of oil by the Government was an insignificant south coast village, settled primarily by a colony of South African Boers as an outlet for their wool shipments and as a port of entry for their meagre requirements. It occupies a desolate strip of land between the Gulf of St. George on the east and bluffs of shale and sand on the west. It is reached after a fiveday boat trip from Buenos Aires, there being four steamship lines in operation in addition to the Government tankers."

According to the history of the development, oil was found there accidentally in 1907 while the Government was putting down a well in search for water. At a depth of 1,700 feet shows of oil appeared, which later began to flow spontaneously, revealing the existence of oil in quantities entirely unsuspected. As soon as the discovery was made known the President set aside all the land within a radius of fifteen miles as a reserve upon which private operations were prohibited. Five more wells were started at once and in September of 1910, when the commercial existence of oil had been proved, Congress passed a law reserving an area of 12,000 acres to be exploited by the Government. In addition to this reserve there are surrounding it more than 100,000 acres on which private exploration has been prohibited by Presidential decree, issued May, 1913, and which, it is almost certain, will eventually be incorporated with the first reserve.

"The most outstanding distinction of the field, however, "according to the review, "is that it is not only 100 percent owned by the Government, but has been entirely financed, developed and operated by Government administration. It is a remarkable example of oil exploitation of the people, for the people and by the people. Keep the following in mind, it is necessary for an understanding of the motives and policies of the Argentine people. The Argentine Republic, a country one-third as large as the United States, has no supply of coal within her borders. Her fuel bill is enormous. Over 200,000 tons of coal, mostly Welsh, are imported monthly, which in a year's time amounts to around the sum of $25,000,000.

"Add to this another $25,000,000 representing the value of the imports of petroleum and its products and one will realise what the discovery of oil within her borders meant to the nation. If the potentialities of this discovery could be developed to the extent of supplying only the country's own fuel needs, this annual outlay could be kept at home. The supreme need was an ample and cheap supply of fuel, and popular opinion demanded official action. It was natural then that the Government should take maternal care of the infant industry, guarding it jealously from private hands and fostering it according to her own ideas."

It is pointed out that the development of the reserves was at first slow, but in recent years operations have been on a more active scale. Up to the end of 1914 only fourteen wells were drilled, but with the coming of the war and the consequent cessation of coal importations the need for fuel became even more acute, and the Government increased its drilling efforts. By the end of 1922 220 producing wells had been drilled, the production being approximately 6,000 barrels per day. Except for an initial appropriation of less than $3,000,000 all of the development and operations have been financed by the production, and today, according to Government reports, the reserve has a book value of $20,000,000. As far as the Comodoro Rivadavia oil field is concerned, the development and administration has been carried out by the Argentine Government most efficiently and successfully.

The following figures, showing the production in barrels from the Government reserve at Comodoro Rivadavia for the last ten years, indicate the extent of its growth: 1914, 275,131 barrels; 1915, 515,299 barrels; 1916, 817,066 barrels; 1917, 1,142,961 barrels; 1918, 1,242,886 barrels; 1919, 1,183,113 barrels; 1920, 1,405,687 barrels; 1921, 1,714,817 barrels; 1922, estimated production 2,155,000 barrels, and in 1923 the estimated production was 2,343,000 barrels.

It is pointed out that private companies were formed to secure and drill edge acreage, but on the whole, they were not successful. A few dry holes showed that the cream of the region had been reserved by the Government. Government drilling operations were carried on unrestrictedly under special decrees, but private operation found that they were hampered by and had to struggle with an antiquated mining law, the regulations of which were vague, ambiguous, and interpreted in as many different ways as there were officials. Argentine capital could be had for financing an agricultural or livestock proposition, but the capitalists were loath to venture into a new game, the laws of which were so uncertain.

THREE COMPANIES SURVIVED

"Three of these private companies", says the review, "survived the early difficulties and obtained producing wells and the consequent mining concessions. The Astra Company, in which German capital is interested, has a concession of 7,000 acres, twelve miles north of Comodoro Rivadavia, on which it has drilled forty wells. About half of these are producing, the production for 1923 being estimated at 600,000 barrels. It has recently completed a pipeline to the coast, with a sea-loading station, and proposes to begin soon the transportation of its own oil which, at the present time, as in the past, is shipped in Government tankers. The Compania de Petroleo de Comodoro Rivadavia, financed by Argentine and English capital, has a concession of 1,200 acres joining the Government reserve on the north. Three wells are in operation, with a producing capacity of 500 barrels a day, the output being somewhat limited for lack of transportation facilities.

"The Compania Argentina de Comodoro Rivadavia has a concession of some 3,700 acres, located north of the Government reserve and along the coast. It was leased in 1920 to a syndicate of three Argentine railways, owned by English capital, the Southern, the Western and the Pacific, who desired to assure for themselves an ample fuel supply. Since taking over the property they have pushed the development, having completed over fifty wells, which are now producing at the rate of 300,000 barrels a year. The terms of their lease provided for an extensive drilling campaign.

"The Anglo-Persian, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the Royal Dutch, Hugo Stinnes, the British Burmah, the Dutch [illegible] and the French Company [illegible] appeared on the stage in the order named, and by the end of 1922 a ring of tests had been started around the edge of the reserve. Altogether the above companies or their locally formed subsidiaries have started forty tests and invested to date a sum estimated at around $15,000,000. The result so far has been two small pumpers, with a production of less than 100 barrels a day, twenty-five dry holes and one weak gasser. Twelve are yet to be completed.

"According to geologists, the Comodoro Rivadavia field is located almost in the centre of a great half-circular basin which has a diameter of almost 150 miles. The basement rocks, granites and porphyries, are overlaid by sedimentary strata of clays and variegated formation sandstones. It is in this latter cretaceous formation that the oil is found. Topping this are the tertiary clays which, along the coast, are 1,200 feet thick.

BELGIUM MAY ASK HIGH PRICE FOR RADIUM SUPPLY

U. S. Paper Fears Rich Deposits In Congo May Be Exploited

Fear that the discovery of rich radium deposits in the Belgian Congo will impose on the world's cancer sufferers the burden of paying huge profits is expressed editorially by Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, official journal of the American Chemical Society.

"Radium," it is said, "is still such an expensive element that its use is limited, and no doubt the percentage of cases treated successfully by physicians would become much greater if it were possible to sell radium at a price that would put within their reach a quantity adequate for treatment.

"The world frowns upon the policy that strives to handle projects related to health and disease in the same manner as the ordinary commercial undertaking. Corners and monopolies, profiteering, and maintenance of high prices cannot be tolerated in matters pertaining to public health.

"For some time the price of radium remained from $100 to $120 per milligram. Then came a sudden decline to $70 per milligram, this reduction following a discovery of ore of unusual richness in the Belgian Congo. Two deposits have been found about 80 miles apart and 75 ton lots of ore from them have averaged as high as 85 percent uranium ovide. Specimens running above 87 percent are not unique.

"This means that the ore runs approximately four and one-half tons per gram of radium and, according to our information, the Belgian plants commonly produce a gram of radium for each nine tons of ore treated.

"When this is compared with the average of 400 tons of ore treated to one gram of radium produced by one of the leading chemical companies in America, and approximately 250 tons per gram of radium produced in the Government works near Denver, some conception of the influence upon the radium market and the possibilities may be derived.

"This African ore is not only phenomenally rich, but is free from some of the substances that ordinarily, interfere with radium purification. It is even estimated that, with ore of this character and grade, the cost including overhead does not exceed $5 per milligram.

"The $70 per miligram is the figure which was calculated to stop operations of American companies and has succeeded in doing so.

"The question now comes as to whether cancer sufferers of the world and particularly of America, are to be compelled to pay a huge profit to the Belgian companies which have control of these new deposits.

"A reasonable profit is legitimate but surely the medical profession and the world at large can take particular exception to the present situation and demand fair treatment, which will not only give a handsome return on the cost of operation, but enable the price of radium to be reduced to the point where its benefits can be shared by the many now denied them wholly on account of the price.

"History is replete with examples of those who might have made a personal fortune from medical discoveries, but the names of the discoverers are remembered because of their refusal to profit by the misfortunes of their fellow men."

NEW ENTERPRISES IN AMERICA NOW GETTING FEWER

Returns For May Embrace 595 Firms Of $100,000 Capital

New York, June 15.—From the returns available it appears that 595 new enterprises with an authorised capital of $100,000 or over were organised under the laws of the different States during May, involving a grand total of $519,897,000. In the corresponding period a year ago 894 concerns were charactered with a combined authorised capital of Th$17,229,500. The fact that the past month's total is the smallest in some time is regarded by bankers and industrial leaders as only natural in view of the further contraction in general business, which has encouraged promoters to abandon plans calling for the formation of new companies until there are positive signs of a permanent turn for the better.

Since January 1, 3,748 companies took out charters with an aggregate capital of $3,397,440,900. During the first months of 1923 4,226 concerns were incorporated, representing a total of $3,934,708,900.

A further heavy decrease is noted in the total covering new oil and gas companies, so that they will make a poorer showing than for quite a while. Fewer shipping concerns were incorporated, while new chemical companies are more numerous in the returns. This is indicated in the following summary:

	—May—
Companies	1924
Oil and gas	Th34,315,000
Chemical	6,225,000
Shipping	850,000
	1923
Oil and gas	$99,085,000
Chemical	4,175,000
Shipping	5,800,000

Since the armistice was signed new oil and gas companies have reached the gigantic total of $10,721,118,840. New chemical new oil and gas companies have occupied a prominent place in the compilation, as will be seen from the following table:

SINCE SIGNING OF ARMISTICE

Oil and gas companies	$10,721,840
Chemical companies	1,291,656,000
Shipping companies	890,068,000

THREATENED BOYCOTT OF AMERICA CAUSES NO WORRY

Japanese Action Will Not Be Grave, Commerce Department Says

Washington, June 10.—Officials of the Department of Commerce do not believe that the threatened boycott of American goods by Japan will prove to be of serious proportions. If boycotting takes place, it will not affect the great bulk of the American export trade to Japan, of which the principal articles are iron and steel and raw cotton, according to the view of authorities on the subject. It is pointed out that the boycotting would have to be confined to commodities easily distinguished by the consumer as of American origin and that iron and steel and raw cotton are of such a character that by the time they are manufactured into finished products the purchaser usually cannot identify the country of origin.

Furthermore, the United States buys so much more from Japan than Japan buys from this country it would not be to [illegible] cott on an extensive scale. Retaliatory measures by the United States could injure Japan seriously, inasmuch as 31 percent of Japanese exports come to the United States. Only 6 percent of American exports go to Japan; 90 percent of our imports from Japan consists of raw silk, while the remainder includes such items as toys, silk piece goods and matting, most of which American consumers could do without if considered necessary or desirable.

Exports from the United States to Japan in 1923 were valued at $264,124,000, while imports into the United States were valued at $346,940,000. Japanese goods bought by the United States amounted to $82,816,000 more than those purchased by Japan from this country.

Many of the commodities obtained by Japanese from the United States are essential to its industrial life. A few of them could be obtained [illegible]

The Troubles Of The Salt Merchants

IT is next to impossible for any outsider to understand the various ramifications of the Chinese salt industry, but it is known at least that the business is a government monopoly and that the Government receives a considerable income from the tax which is levied upon the salt which is consumed by the Chinese people. The Government does not actually produce and sell salt; this business is farmed out to salt merchants by the Government under a system of monopolistic contracts. The territory of China has been divided into some eleven salt areas and it is forbidden to transport and sell salt from one area to another. In short, the salt produced in one place must be sold in a certain definite area. In this way the Government keeps, or is supposed to keep, the business under control and also to maintain a uniform price throughout the country. It is maintained that in this way the Government prevents exploitation of the business to the detriment of the Chinese people, since salt, like rice, is a necessity.

The development of militarism in the days of the Republic has had its reactions upon the Government system of salt taxation. Naturally few military governors have been able to resist the temptation to get into the salt business. Recently it was charged that the Military Governor of Hunan, General Chao Heng-ti, had applied to the Government for permission to ship a large amount of salt into his province in violation of the old agreement with the merchants who control this area. Whether his application was sanctioned, we do not know, but reports in the Peking papers stated that he was expected to clear a million dollars on the deal, which would have its resultant in losses to Chinese merchants holding the Government contracts for salt distribution. Situations somewhat similar to this exist in Manchuria and in Kwangtung Province and elsewhere.

Now in addition to this, a new element has developed, which is also embarrassing the "old" salt merchants. The salt which is produced and sold in China is "coarse" salt or natural salt, as it is crystalised from the salt-water of the sea or from salt obtained from salt wells in certain parts of the country. The Chinese people generally do not know the fine white or "refined" salt common over the world and in the various treaty ports. Under an arrangement made several years ago, foreigners were permitted to import refined salt into the treaty ports for their own use which is not subject to the Government salt tax. Then later on Chinese companies were permitted to manufacture refined salt to be sold in competition with the refined salt in the treaty ports.

Under the aegis of this agreement, the new refined salt manufacturing companies have waxed opulent, and, with certain official backing, are now reported to be extending their operations outside of the treaty ports into the interior and are encroaching on the Government districts which have been reserved for the old salt merchants who operate under Government contract. This encroachment or competition is said to be particularly acute in the so-called "Yin Area" of the Yangtsze Valley, since it is reported that the competition of the refined salt is being seriously felt by the old salt merchants and it is reported that many people are being thrown out of employment in which they have been engaged for generations and their parents before them.

According to reports which have been published in the vernacular papers, the so called "new" salt merchants or manufacturers of refined salt have recently obtained, with certain official assistance, the right to extend their sale of salt outside of the treaty ports into the old restricted areas to the extent of 3,000,000 piculs in a period of three years. The Kung Hung Mao, the Tsing Chi Chang, and the Yih Woo Chang, being the names of various guilds of merchants engaged in the transportation of old-style or coarse salt, in their behalf claim that the new regulations are nothing but a scheme whereby the new salt refining companies are to be permitted to invade the old restricted districts. As a result, they have appealed for protection to Sir Ernest Wilton, of the Salt Inspectorate-General in Peking, and also to the officials of Kiangsu Province to prevent the infringement upon their Government monopolies. Their petition states:

"As the welfare and livelihood of millions of people and oven-labor along the Huai districts depend entirely upon the preservation of their rights in the "Yin" or Yangtsze area, the destruction of which will cause innumerable people to lose their means of earning a living and eventually force them into starvation or banditry, we beg of your excellencies to grant us the legal protection to which we are entitled."

As stated in the introduction to this discussion, it is quite difficult for an outsider, and especially a foreigner, to understand all of the ins and outs of the controversy which is now going on in the Salt Administration, but that it is serious, there can be no question. The salt merchants controlling the old monopolistic areas apparently are being menaced on two sides, one being the militarists, who are going into the salt business themselves for purposes of private profit and as a means of raising money for the payment of troops, and on the other side is the encroachment of the new refined salt companies which are supposed to be restricted to the treaty ports.

Foreigners have an interest in this owing to the fact that important loans have been advanced on the guarantee of the salt tax, and although the Salt Administration has thus far been able to meet all of its obligations and to have a surplus, there is no certainty that this good record can be continued, if the rumblings of discontent now prevalent mean anything. Although it is impossible for the Government to restrict the activities of the militarists who are dabbling in the salt as well as in about everything else in the country, it would seem that the Government should be able to mediate in the squabble between the old and new salt merchants before the controversy assumes the proportions of a definite outbreak.

The Potency Of Advertisements

VISCOUNT Burnham, a powerful figure in the realm of British journalism and President of the Empire Press Union, has just had the privilege of welcoming over 5,000 delegates from all parts of the world to the first International Advertising Convention in Europe, which was opened on Monday by the Prince of Wales in the Palace of Industry at Wembley. In the course of the proceedings, the Prince said that advertising aimed at providing throughout the world a freer exchange of commodities at a lower cost of distribution, resulting in the elimination of waste and the reduction of prices and unemployment. In giving this definition of the function of advertising, he was only re-stating in other terms a truth which is well known to the world of commerce, which has rightly come to regard advertising as an ally in business and industry the potentialities of which are virtually limitless.

The unique Convention just opened at Wembley, the first of its kind in Europe, is of particular interest to newspapers the world over since newspapers are one of the chief mediums resorted to by advertisers in the conduct of their business. Advertising, in fact, is the newspaper's backbone. The world has only recently begun to realise how vitally necessary it is to business. Some years ago it was estimated that probably from £40,000,000 to £50,000,000 a year was spent on advertising with various journals and periodicals in Great Britain alone. Perhaps as much was spent in Central Europe and at least four times as much in North America. Those figures applied to advertising a few years ago, and since then they must have risen correspondingly with the expansion of industry. All these vast revenues are a subsidy paid by the public in aid of journalism and for the provision of news. They enable the newspaper proprietor to give to his readers a product, which costs him from four to ten times the amount which he receives from them in purchase of his papers, and in return they give to him and his advertisers part of their daily attention and ultimately they requite him by buying more or less of the articles advertised in the paper. Thus there is an ingenious exchange of services which makes the management of a newspaper, in a commercial sense, almost as complicated a process as its editorial conduct.

The process, as an outstanding authority on the subject of newspapers reminds us, is attended by a subtle danger. With the increasing expenses of modern newspapers under the stress of competition, the necessity of swelling the advertising revenue of a paper becomes of paramount importance. So the courting of prominent advertisers is every day more and more the preoccupation of a newspaper manager, and he is apt to listen too favorably to any representations made by strong monied interests and himself to exercise a corresponding pressure on the editorial side of the enterprise. Here is the point where the newspaper, as an essential feature of its career as a business, may be said to have a conscience, or should have one. The tendency to a decline and fall into the last stages of commercialism must at all costs be resisted. If not resisted, it may become suicidal, and, by ultimately weakening and losing the hold which a newspaper has on its readers, it may sacrifice its capacity for usefulness to the public and lose its own source of strength and revenue. Or worse still, the tendency may be followed downhill almost to a criminal extent and lead to organised fraud and systematic blackmail.

The philosophy of publicity is rather hard to grasp. In some forms it comes perilously near to charlatanry and quackedy, and yet in the modern world it is not only a valuable aid to business but absolutely indispensable. Although the practice has been known to all ages, it is only development of the immensely productive power of the factory system, which has caused its enormous extension during the last century. In former times goods were produced with difficulty and found their hungry markets waiting for them. It is entirely different nowadays. The chief modern problem is to sell goods fast enough to prevent a glut of production. To take a concrete instance from modern America, the output of motor cars, as these lines are written, is considerably more than one a minute, and in order to secure continuous cheapness of production, this rate of output must be maintained and probably even increased. All this flood of production has to be marketed without delay and without intermission. The missing of even one month's sale of such a prodigious output would entail the bankruptcy of half the manufacturers in the country.

It is advertising which supplies the remedy for their ever-present difficulty. It affords the chief practical solution of the paradox of modern industry, which requires that goods shall be manufactured in immense quantities in order to secure cheapness of production and yet will not allow that they should be put on the market in too large quantities at a time for fear of creating a glut and lowering prices. Demand must never be satiated. It must be perpetually stimulated so as to maintain a steady suction at least equivalent to and preferably exceeding the normal rate of output. The most effective and almost universal method of obtaining this stimulation of demand is by advertising, and although it is to be sadly confessed that a certain type of advertiser likes to emulate the blatant methods of the circus manager, there is a more dignified type that aims to make his advertisements soberly educative, and these will always receive ready attention. Despite the existence of not a few cantankerous individuals who regard any money spent in advertising in the light of quasi-charity, the great majority of business-men recognise advertising as the soul of business—a vital function that is being reduced almost to a science.

THE SPIRIT OF THE DAY'S WORK

Perhaps we might get along better if we remembered that it is all in a day's work.

There's a lot to be done, but we don't have to do it all today.

And the higher the task, and the more difficult, delicate, and important the matter, the more necessary it is to attack in the spirit of a day's work at a time.

To learn to play the piano, or to read French, or to overcome a bad habit, or to write shorthand, or to achieve poise, and patience, or to be good—nobody can come at such accomplishments at once.

It is little by little, the steady forcing of the will upon one's stubborn desire, mind, or fingers, whether we feel like it or not. Just as a day's work, it is so we crawl up the steep hill of perfection.

The will to do is important, and the ambition to do is necessary, and hard work counts; but one essential to any excellence, whether in craftsmanship or character, is time.

Somehow or other the past endues us. There's no such thing as a fresh start. Every new start carries with it something of those we made before. Every effort slits something into our nerves or brain cells so that they are different next time.

The power of the thirtieth day is the result of the invisible dividends of the twenty-nine preceding days' work.

Somebody asked Susanne Wesley, John's mother, why she told her children the same thing over and over twenty times. "Because nineteen is not enough," she answered.

In that greatest of earthly businesses, mothering, it is the spirit of the day's work that helps. To carry on so complicated and vital affair as the training of children there is needed above all that self-possession which comes only when we conceive of our work as lasting but one day. And it is when we look forward too much and keep expecting results that time alone can give, that we fall into the petulance or fretfulness that destroys the quality of our guidance.

The clock has millions of ticktocks to make, but it has a moment in which to do each one of them. The sun rises regularly to his duty and sets at night satisfied with what increment of growth his day's work has supplied to living things.

And we—we need never expect to arrive—our business is not to arrive, it is to travel, to cover each day our allotted span, leaving all questions of ends and values and rewards to that Mind that thinks in centuries and weaves men and the labors of men into its vast fabric.

Our plan is on the trestle-board, our lines are known for this day's duties, let us do what is marked out for us; it is for us in this world to live "by the day," and not "by the job."

Something To Think About

By Bruno Lessing

A LONESOME SOUL

An article on "Lonesome Clubs" struck a chord in the heart of a correspondent in Washington, D. C. He is in the Naval Hospital, and he is evidently lonesome.

"I will appreciate very much," he writes, "any information you can give me about a Lonesome Club in this city. I am really very lonesome and I don't get any opportunity to get acquainted with young people."

We regret that the article aroused a false hope. Its purpose was merely to suggest that it would be a good idea to have a Lonesome Club in every city. Unfortunately the idea has not yet been carried out We know of no such club in Washington, D. C.

This correspondent's letter, however, is very appealing. One wants to help him out. What suggestion would appeal to him?

It is evidently useless to advise him to read and study and improve his mind. The companionship of books and culture do not appeal to him or else he would not have written his letter. Many books are within his reach, not only in the Naval Hospital but in all the public libraries of the city.

It must be taken for granted, therefore, that what he wants is the companionship of young people—the light, the music and the joy of youth. And—perhaps he is timid—he does not know how to go about it.

Well, here is our advice:

Get a city directory, young man, and pick out the names of half a dozen clergymen of different denominations. Write to them as follows:

"I am lonesome! I would like to meet young people. I would like to talk to them, to play with them, to sing with them, to dance with them—I want to be with them. I do not want to listen to preaching. I do not want to join a church or a sect or a creed. I am not looking for education or religion. I am merely lonesome and I do not know anybody in this town."

Some of these clergymen will call upon you. Some will not. Of those that call, one, perhaps, will have a big heart and will understand your problem. He will help you. The famous bishop in "Les Miserables," who told the thief that he was welcome to the silver that he had stolen from the bishop's house, had the right idea.

Anyway, dear correspondent, try it. And let us know the outcome. There must, surely, be some clergyman in your town—aye, in every town—who believes that the mission of his vocation is higher than any creed or church or even meddling in politics.

The Key To The Atom's Power

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Ever since the discovery of the existence of almost unlimited energy locked up in the atoms of matter, it has been a dream of inventive minds to find some way in which that energy could be released for human use. And the soberest-minded thinkers have hardly expressed a doubt of the possibility of this dream being realised. If realised, it would so magnify the mechanical power of man that the puny inhabitants of this earth could perform works worthy of demigods. Indeed, in order to give an aspect of probability to the supposition that the Martians have been able to cover their whole planet with gigantic systems of irrigating canals, and to handle the stupendous annual floods resulting from the melting of the polar snow-fields as easily as we handle the overflow from an ordinary reservoir, it would only be necessary to assume that they have found out the secret of unlocking and controlling intra-atomic energy.

But nobody on our globe has yet seen even a crack in the defenses of the atom whereby entrance could be made to the secret chamber of its power, unless it may be that the location of the weak point is revealed by Sir Oliver Lodge's recent suggestion that the way to "put the atom to work" may be found by following up the curious fact that the atomic weight of hydrogen is no unity, or just 1, but 1.0077.

This is a fact of chemistry that has long puzzled all investigators, because there seems every reason to believe that hydrogen atoms are, as it were, the bricks by combination of which other atoms are built up, and a brick ought to be a brick and not a brick plus a small fraction. Now, an explanation is suggested by Oliver Lodge in this way: Helium seems surely to be built up of four atoms of hydrogen; yet its atomic weight is only just 4, whereas it should be 4.0308 if it contains four hydrogen atoms each weighing 1.0077.

The question then is: What becomes of the extra fractions when four hydrogen atoms are compacted into a helium nucleus?

The answer suggested requires some knowledge of the electrical theory of matter to be thoroughly grasped, but the substance of it is that when electric charges are "squeezed closely together" they interfere with one another to a certain extent. "Two opposite charges at a reasonable distance apart will have double the inertia (weight) of one; but if you pack them too tightly together the combined inertia will be less than double."

Now such tight packing must occur in the helium nucleus, the result being a certain loss of weight in the combined mass of the four close-packed hydrogen atoms. Assume that the amount of weight thus lost equals, for each of the four atoms, the fraction .0077, and the fact that helium, although composed of four hydrogen atoms, has an atomic weight of exactly 4 instead of 4.0308, is explained.

But, then, what becomes of the lost weight, or inertia, of the hydrogen atoms when they are squeezed into helium nuclei. The answer to this question brings us to the point we set out for, viz., the place where atomic energy is released. Matter and energy seem to be interchangeable. When a certain portion of the electricity constituting the atoms in the form which we call matter is destroyed as matter, it reappears as energy.

There is not space here to show how prodigious is the amount of energy thus available; let it suffice to say that the small fraction of it released in the way described is so gigantic that if we could get control of it, it "would put all our other sources of energy to shame."

We cannot, as yet, "pack hydrogen into helium, or into any other of the heavier atoms." But it must have been done "some time and somewhere; perhaps in the interior of stars, certainly in ways at present unknown."

So we are at least arrived in face of the barred gate, and may now consider how it is to be forced.

Revolution

The eye of the thinker sometimes finds it difficult to perceive in what consists a Revolution. Certainly it is something that revolves.

But is it things revolving around us, or is it ourselves revolving around things?

The effect is that things are seen from another side; and as the history of the world is but the story of successive revolutions, it follows logically that by dint of seeing things continually from new sides we come eventually to see them from the side at which we began. That result is known as restoration.

Guido Celli says that the philosopher who knows the earth is round, and that by walking steadily in one direction he will find himself bye and bye once more at his garden gate, remains calm and serene at the announcement of all revolutionary ideas.

After a while the advance guard of human thought, the extremists and pioneers, will see him before them in the distance and will hail him as a man who is before his time, a prophet, a dreamer of the future, while the fact is that he has simply stood still and the world has got around to him again.

So we wrestle and cry and run about, and it is only long after we are all dead that some critic or historian comes along and decides whether we were going north or south.

Of course, this does not mean that we must never change nor go forward and that there is no improvement. It simply means that, as Bergson says, all real advance is in the direction of clarifying the instincts.

For instance, you love your wife. That sentiment may pass through ages of experiment and vast eras of argument and psychology and sin and repentance and religion and freedom and so on and so on, but bye and bye it gets around to just about where it started. You love your wife.

Or take an economic example. You should pay your debts. Pass that through forty eleven libraries of learned discussions on figures and the balance of trade and law and custom and socialism and this and that, and after a while you get around to that fact from which you started—you ought to pay your debts.

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

Newest of All Summer Parasols Are Those of Figured Cretonne

Rings were worn before gloves and parasols were carried before umbrellas. Men and women generally adopted the more fanciful and more ornate article of apparel before they adopted those built for service only.

The very name umbrella might be enough to show that such devices were carried to protect us from the sun before they were thought of as shields against the rain. For the umbrella quite obviously comes from the Italian umbrella, which in turn is derived from the Latin word meaning shadow. It was a sunshade to begin with.

Interestingly enough men, except a few rather old men or victims of previous sunstroke, avoid carrying parasols. Not two centuries ago the man in England who ventured forth carrying an umbrella for rain was jeered at and derided for his effeminate French fashion. It was most womanish to carry an umbrella. If you were not hardy enough to brave the rain then you should take a coach. That was the taunt. Now of course every man jack among us carries an umbrella when it rains. But he does not carry a parasol. That would be too effeminate. Just why he raises the distinction might be difficult for the visitor from Mars to understand.

In ancient times men as well as women carried umbrellas and doubtless Tuk-ankh-amen himself seldom appeared in public without his royal umbrella borne aloft—to shield him from the sun.

One thing that doubtless has contributed to the revived interest in umbrellas this year is the number of charming and original parasols that have been offered by the various parasol makers. But even with all these sunshades to tempt us we do not seem to be willing to carry them as eagerly as did our grandmothers. There is something distinctly Victorian still about a parasol.

One of the most interesting of the new parasols is made of cretonne and departs from the time-honored custom of parasols as it has the material stretched straight across the ribs without being gored or fitted whatever. This is of course done so as not to interfere with the effect of the large cretonne design.

Parasol of cretonne. The fabric is cut in a big circle so that there is no break in the pattern.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

SOMETHING NEW

Some of the shops are showing sheer beige stockings with insets of fine figured black lace at instep and ankle. There is a growing tendency to wear pearl or silver colored stockings with black patent leather slippers, and among the smartest women are seen many laced oxfords instead of slippers or pumps.

DO YOU KNOW THE DIFFERENCE—

Between a gardenia and a camellia?

These two flowers, sometimes confused in the minds of those whose knowledge of flowers chiefly comes from those that bloom in the milliners' garden, are both named after botanists. It was Joseph Camel, a Jesuit, who first described the blossom later named for him. He lived nearly three hundred years ago and traveled in Eastern Asia where he found these charming flowers and was the first European to describe them.

The gardenia was named after a Dr. Garden, a native of Charleston, S. C., who lived some century and a half ago and first made a study of the flower named for him, which was a native of the Cape of Good Hope and parts of Asia.

There really seems to be very little in common between the flowers save that they are both of waxy whiteness. In nature's garden there are no rose or red gardenias though there are red camelias.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

BY Wm. F. KIRK

Pa bringed hoam a Radio set to our house last nite & he fixed it up in the dining room & all the time he was fixing it he was telling us about the swell musick we wud heer.

Will it work all rite? sed Ma.

Why not? sed Pa. All of them sets work all rite wen they are fixed, sed Pa. In a few minutes you will be lissening to sweet stranes of musick that will lull yure spirrit & bring memrys of yure golden chile-hood, sed Pa.

It hardly seems possible, sed Ma. I wish thay cud maik a masheen that wud bring back my golden chile-hood, sed Ma.

Then Pa sed, well, all is in reddiness. Now lissen.

So all three of us sat & lissen & sure enuff after a wile we herd sumthing, it sounded like the cat scrath-ing on the hard wood floar.

What orkestry is that? sed Ma.

That isent a orkestry, sed Pa, that is a man telling a story.

I can't heer no words, only scratching, I sed.

Be pashunt, Bobbie, sed Pa. Be pashunt.

That is all I can heer, too, sed Ma, scratch, scratch, scratch, the cats are marching, sed Ma.

It doesnt seam to be working jest rite yet, sed Pa. But it will it will. We must git the Staticks.

You meen the catticks sed Ma Scratch, scratch, sed Ma.

Then Pa got kind of huffery, he yanked the Radio off of the tabel & went in the other room & started to reed the baseball scores in the paiper.

Why doant you git those baseball scores from this wunderful Radio set? sed Ma.

Nevver mind the Radio set, sed Pa.

Bobbie & I will set it up ourself, sed Ma, so we set it up & after a minnit we herd a butiful tune beeing played by a band in Chicago.

Thare, you see, sed Pa wen he caim out of the other room, you are not so smart after all.

Is that so? sed Ma. It seams to me I am prity smart. I knew how to fix this Radio so it wud work, which is moar than you cud do. I git marches out it, you only got scratches, sed Ma.

The moar I think of it, the moar smarter Ma is & the less smarter Pa is. Sumtimes I wonder if my wife will be moar smarter than what I am wen I am groan up & have a wife.

Well, wife, sed Pa, dident I tell you that this Radio wud be wunderful wen we got it going?

When we got it going? sed Ma. Bobbie, sed Ma, who got this Radio going?

You did, Ma, I sed. You are the smartest lady in our town, O. K. I sed. You can fix anything, I sed. Maybe you can fix it so I git a dollar for a new fish poal, I sed. & you bet Ma can, too.

Telephoning To America—British Sell American Oil Leases—Canada And British West Indies Angered Over McKenna Duties—White Sea Conference Criticises British Ports

(From Our Own Correspondent)

London, June 10.—Very shortly, it is predicted, telephoning via wireless to America will be possible. The General Post Office has started the foundation of a special 200 kw. thermionic valve transmitting plant at Rugby which is especially designed for this purpose. These "two-way conversations" are expected to be developed and ready to be put on a commercial basis during next winter. In order to overcome atmospheric and other difficulties the engineers have constructed a special type of receiving antenna which is not so susceptible to the effect of the conditions which usually detract from the clearness of the signals.

Many messages have already been distributed over the telephone land lines to different parts in England.

SELL OIL INTERESTS

The Dutch Shell Company have sold their oil interests in the United States for £6,000,00 reports the Evening News. The company will now embark upon the development of oilfields in Russia. Mr. J. C. Van Eck, President of the Shell Union Oil Co., has made the following statement: "In confirmation that negotiations have been completed for selling to the Dillon Read Co. certain Shell shares in the Union Oil Co. of California, the board of directors has confirmed the sale today."

Wall Street interprets this as a triumph of American interests to prevent foreign invasion of the American fields.

The holdings aggregate £6,000,000 which are already paid up and will be reinvested in Russian oilfields.

DRUGS DELAY FATIGUE

Two French physiologists have discovered that certain chemical substances, applied to the skin in ointments, will retard the loss of heat and electricity from the body and thus delay the onset of fatigue. Regarding this discovery, Le Matin, Paris, observes:

"On the eve of the Olympic games a most appropriate communication is made by Messrs. Livet and Roger to the Paris Society of Medicine. Studying the fatigue due to muscular exercise, they have shown that it is produced in the course of labor according to a progressive and regular law in ratio to the radiation phenomena of the body. It is known that normally we radiate heat or electricity like an electric radiator. Muscular work increases these losses at the expense of the forces which maintain our temperature constant and our electric potential invariable. Although the production of electricity by the human body is a little-known property, no one is ignorant of the fact that exercise heats us. Now Messrs. Livet and Roger have shown that fatigue occurs more rapidly when this organic heating comes sooner. They have found that certain drugs are able to slow up fatigue and even give new energy to the organism. These are substances of the family of the 'poly-methylic cyclanols' which, in subcolloidal solution, used as unguents with rubbing of the skin, economise strength by opposing losses of heat and electricity by radiation. Experiments on both men and animals have been in agreement on all points and tend to prove that it is possible to retard, in manual laborers, athletes or race-horses, the moment when fatigue is able to interrupt muscular exercise."

During the course of the Empire Exhibition a Congress of Commercial Travellers' Organisations thoughout the Empire will take place in London. Representatives will be present from Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand.

The object of the congress is to confer regarding many interests (such as transportation, commercial travellers' privileges, etc.) which the associations have in common, and concessions in regard to these, benefit funds, residential clubs, and the protection and advancement of the interests of commercial travellers generally. A leading feature of the congress will be discussion as to the promotion of trade within the Empire. In this connection, the secretary of the United Commercial Travellers' Association of Australia, and editor of Australia Today, who will be one of the delegates from Australia, wishes to get into touch with commercial and manufacturing interests desirous of opening up trade relations with that Dominion.

BRITISH WEST INDIES

The Kingston (Jamaica) correspondent of the London Times reports that planting and other interests in Trinidad are cancelling orders which they had intended to place in Great Britain for machinery and other supplies on account of the attitude of the British Government in regard to Imperial preference. The Government of Jamaica has been invited from the elected side of the Legislature to state whether it intends to make representations in Downing street on the preference question. Keen disappointment is felt over the situation, the opinion being generally expressed that the prosperity of the Colony is seriously threatened by the gradual removal of preference. The Barbados Agricultural Society has passed a resolution repudiating the Chancellor of the Exchequer's misleading statement, pointing out that the decreased output of sugar is due to unfavorable seasons, and stating that preference has encouraged expenditure on hundreds of thousands of pounds of machinery purchased in Great Britain. In British Guiana the Georgetown Chamber of Commerce has expressed the opinion that the reduction of over 50 percent in the sugar preference will lead to a corresponding reduction in the preference granted by the Colony to goods from the United Kingdom, thereby encouraging imports from foreign countries.

CANADA ALSO ANGRY

The Times' Canadian correspondent says that the announcement that the McKenna duties will not be continued by the British Government and the latter's hostility to the recommendations of the Economic Conference have strengthened the case of those who are advising abandonment of the British preferential schedule of the Canadian tariff. Without the present tariff advantage over United States producers it seems to be almost certain that Canadian automobile manufacturers will lose the very important export trade which they have built up with the United Kingdom. If the British trade is lost, the Canadian firms will probably be unable to compete in other export markets, because their overhead charges, when spread over the reduced output, are likely to put them out of the running.

Even with the 99 percent drawback of duty paid on imported materials the Canadian automobile manufacturers' production costs at present are said to be 3 percent to 4 percent higher than similar costs in the United States. One of the two principal automobile manufacturing firms in Canada has exported almost one-half of its production. These plants were established in Canada largely in the expectation of a development of Imperial preferential arrangements and because the facility with which materials and component parts from the United States are obtainable made Canada an attractive base for manufacture for the markets of the British Empire.

Rejection by the British Government of the preferential idea threatens to discredit one of the strongest arguments in favor to bring United States money to Canada for the establishment of branch factories, and the action of the British Administration may have a very serious and far-reaching effect on the Canadian industrial situation.

PORTS CRITICISED

The Baltic and White Sea Conference, which made pointed criticism of British ports at its meeting a year ago, brings the subject up again at the session opened at The Hague last week.

The contention is that harbor dues in British ports were high in comparison with Continental ports, principally for the reason that in most of the ports the revenue has been expended in providing facilities on a lavish scale for the big liner traffic, with the result that the accommodation for tramp and ordinary ships has been stinted. The congestion at many ports, which was particularly acute last year, was only in a very slight measure due to an increase in the volume of coal traffic at an exceptional period. The scarcity of lighters in many British ports is said to be another disadvantage, causing delay, and a further handicap is the lack of efficient co-operation between employers, especially in the matter of labor.

The state of affairs at East Coast, Welsh, and Scottish coal ports is criticised as having at various times during the past two years led to a state of chaos. It is not the slow loading but ships are often detained two or three weeks, as it frequently occurs that the cargo is not ready. It is said to be quite a usual thing for a collier to be kept for six to seven days at coal ports for loading only, whereas modern self-trimming colliers of, say, 2,000 to 2,500 tons deadweight should certainly be turned round in two days. This criticism applies with special force to the railway-owned docks, where there is absolute control of the traffic from the collieries to the ports of shipment.

It often happens, it is said, that two steamers of equal size leave a Continental port in ballast, one for Hampton Roads, U. S. A., and the other for the Bristol Channel. On many occasions the former is loaded and has commenced her homeward voyage before the latter has a ton of coal on board. The same complaints apply, it is said, to the coal ports of the Tyne or Humber or the Firth of Forth. A further important factor in the delay to, and the congestion of, tonnage is said to be the insufficiency of railway siding accommodation for coal and mineral traffic. On these and other statements made at the Hague is based the conclusion that the coal shipping facilities at the majority of British ports are inadequate for present-day requirements.

Apart from the cost caused by waiting on turn and stem and by slow work, the present trimming charges at British ports are criticised as being exorbitant. It is also stated that some railway companies who own steamers give their ships preference of turn.

Reference was also made to the disadvantages imposed on shipowners by the congestion at the timber docks in Great Britain arising from inadequate facilities. Some relief has, it was stated, been obtained by the introduction of a better method of freight payment, but none regarding the financial burden arising from congestion. A reminder was given in this connection that port congestion is responsible for higher prices for commodities in the home market and is a handicap to the foreign trade of Great Britain. In the long run the public pays.

LYING TESTIMONIALS

At Aberdeen a ship captain engaged two men for his crew. One man, an Englishman, presented himself with a sheaf of excellent testimonials, and another, a Scotsman, offered his services without possessing a single credential. Both were engaged and subsequently were put on to swab the deck. One of them and the pail were washed overboard. The Scotsman rushed to the captain's cabin and surprised him by saying: "D'ye remember that fellow with the great bunch of characters you signed on?" "I do," replied the officer. "Well," volunteered the Scotchman, "he's awa' wi' your bucket."
